I fully agree with the statement of the writer and poet of the 19th century Oscar Wilde. The author of this quote wanted to say about the importance and necessity of ^{the} theater in the modern world. The theater penetrates into the soul of human, thus conveying the thoughts of the actors.

At the first time, ^{the} theatre illustrates our life. It recreates reality in front of people. In this way actors get closer to the audience. Thanks to this the theater is immersed in the consciousness and experiences of the viewer. The specificity of the theater is that it carries the image of literature and music through a living person. All these reasons support my and author's opinions.

To illustrate my reasons I'll give examples from my personal experience. Nowadays, the theme of the great Patriotic war is very important. Teachers tell students about the events of those years. Students will feel all the emotions along with the actors and it'll lay the memories in their souls.

In conclusion, I'd like to emphasise the fact that the theater plays an important role in life of everyone. Thanks to ~~its~~ features it can share with another the sense of what it is to be a human being.
